I learned how to simulate the interactions between virtual memory and ram. This learning was experienced by using a struct to be used as ram and a file to be used as virtual memory. I copy a line of the file into the struct, which is to simulate copying virtual memory into ram. Then I edited the structs data at an offset to show the access of data within a page frame. Then I copied the struct back to the file to show the removing and updating of a page.